Dear Community Members,

Yes, I'm finally back from vacation. By the time you read this, be it on the website or Sunday, my tan will have faded a bit and I will have attended to various things that have accumulated on my desk in my absence. Still, my vacation was wonderful and I thoroughly enjoyed it. As I've said, vacations are important for the health and welfare of the individual and of his/her family.

I mentioned that I'd be seeing a few people in Florida. I did manage to see my friend, Joe Frank. Happily, I also got together with Mike and Amanda Prince. They're doing well and are quite happy. They'll be visiting us in October and at Christmas time.

I thank Fr. Orlowski for taking care of things during my absence. I didn't bother him much while I was away and only called twice to see how things were. I know he took care of you very well and he has my every confidence and trust.

I read some of the things he wrote in his bulletin letters. Reflecting on what he wrote, I and you, I'm sure, can see how intelligent and smart he is and how tuned in he is, both to the priesthood we share and the prevalent problems "out there" which can affect us all so profoundly. Yes, of course, I mean the great, external problems the Church is experiencing at the moment. But of equal, and sometimes, greater importance, are also the small internal things which, if not attended to, can stand in the way of a parish community's growth and development. We should all take his words very much to heart. As goes the parish, so goes the Church.

My sister continues to ask for your prayers. She had another episode which necessitated another stay in hospital. Thank God, this recent thing wasn't so serious. Still, her condition will certainly not improve until she's able to receive a liver transplant. I plan on seeing her at the end of October.

Though I wouldn't say we're exactly in the "home stretch" of post Pentecost Sundays, there are fewer in front of us than there are behind us. I regret to say that I've already seen ads for "Halloween" candy and costumes. I imagine we'll soon be seeing ads for Thanksgiving turkeys and Christmas (excuse me, "holiday") trees.

Anyway, it's good to be back with you, my children and my friends.

Father Magiera
